

August 30, 2004

Dear Mike,

Thank you so much for presenting your "Can I Kiss You?" program on Central Missouri State University's campus. It has been a real pleasure to work with you—from the booking process to the debriefing after the incredibly successful program—you were professional, honest, and genuine. While listening to your presentation, I was thrilled to see how you were able to connect with and engage a diverse audience of 1400 students, including athletes, first year students, upperclass students, and men and women. I was especially impressed at how you were able to talk about the very sensitive issue of sexual assault in a way that did not alienate one gender or pit one gender against another. Instead, you had both the men and the women in our audience saying, "Yes! That's exactly how I feel!"

I have received specific feedback from several students and staff members who attended one of your two programs on campus. Here are some tidbits:

"His program really made some of my teammates think in new ways. The program was really good."—upperclass male athlete

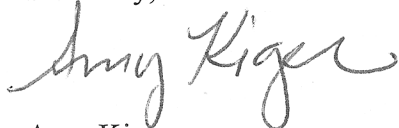

"He really knows what he's talking about. My residents and I all loved the program."—
Community Advisor for floor of first year female students

"I felt the ripple effect from his [Can I Kiss You?] program here. It was very powerful."— campus psychologist speaking of the number of students who sought services following your program

"This was an excellent program, and I'm very glad I required my team to attend."—head football coach

Again, I am so thankful for your visit to Central Missouri. I am confident that your presentations truly made a difference in the lives of our students. I look forward to working with you again in the future.

Sincerely,

Amy Kiger
Coordinator of Health Promotion and Wellness Services and
The Lighthouse Violence Prevention and Intervention Center