Dear Mike,

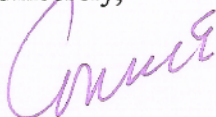

Thank you so much for your valuable contribution in providing a program to culminate GMU's Turn Off the Violence Week. The student response to your program speaks volumes about how much it did for our campus and for raising awareness about developing healthy relationships.

During the "Train the Trainer" sessions, all persons involved learned new techniques to use in presentations and have actually successfully implemented some of your great ideas already. The way you were able to reach the specific student groups was amazing. We can only hope to emulate the style you use to connect with and reach the many groups of students on campus.

The evening presentation, the main event, so to speak, was fantastic. The 450 in attendance were enthralled by both your style and your message. Our students gained useful ways to talk candidly about boundaries in a relationship. They also learned how to implement communication techniques that promote respect for both partners in a relationship.

Thanks for all three of your wonderful presentations and for being so accessible to our office, our volunteers and the entire George Mason campus. We look forward to working with you in the future and we wish you continued success.

Sincerely,

Connie Kirkland
