

SALVE
REGINA
UNIVERSITY

May 26, 2005

To Whom It May Concern:

Mike Domitrz's performance, "Can I Kiss You?" was nothing short of astounding. Seldom have I seen an audience as captivated throughout a lecture. But what Mike does is much more than a lecture. It's a passionate, informative, and thoroughly enlightening encounter. The students are engaged by Mike from the moment he walks on stage, and stay on the edge of their seats throughout.

Perhaps the most crucial point Mike presents is the importance of communication with the opposite sex regarding intimacy. We learned that gender differences are such that males tend not to communicate when being intimate with someone else. In part, it is this lack of communication that Mike points out, and something that causes many of the mixed signals in intimate encounters.

Please note that many students arrived at Mike's presentation saying "We have heard this all before." However, the evaluations almost unanimously stated that "Can I Kiss You?" was in fact the best presentation they had ever heard at Salve Regina.

Finally, Mike shared his own personal tragedy: the rape of his sister and his reaction to it, both short term and long term. It was an honest, sincere, and heart wrenching story and a teachable moment as well. The audience heard and felt his emotions and hopefully many took something valuable away from this tragedy.

We look forward to bringing Mike back again next year, and without hesitation I would recommend him highly to other groups. The lessons learned may save someone else from a lifetime of pain.

Sincerely,

John Quinn
Dean of Students